In 1909 Dayton was in the grisly grips of a serial murder rapist. More than 100 years later, Brian Forschner began piecing together the missing evidence on a murder trail gone cold and overlooked by local authorities.

Brian is an author who wears many hats, including those of teacher, counselor, consultant and writer. His knowledge of the Dayton area and penchant for research and criminology has helped him bring to life areas of our local past that had for years gone cold.

Join us as we hear the fascinating story of how Brian came to research and write about this incredible case.
